RACTICALLY every item in the cost of living is still far ABOVE 1913 pre-war levels except one. That is household electricity. The average rate paid for this indispensable service throughout the United States in 1932 was 33% BELOW the 1913 pre-war level.

The bills pictured on the left of this advertisement show how much MORE is actually paid by the average citizen in 1932 for clothing, rent, food, house furnishing goods and miscellaneous commodities, than was paid back in the pre-war days of 1913. The bill pictured in the upper right hand corner shows how much LESS average rate per Kilowatt hour the household user of electricity throughout the nation pays now than he paid for the same unit of service back in 1913. Household electricity is today's biggest bargain—and practically the only item of living costs for which the average rate is still below pre-war prices.

* The price of household electricity to customers of Alabama Power Com-pany in 1932 is more than 16% be-low the average price of household electricity in the U. S. A. as a whole.

So much for field peas. Now is the time to think most about wincter peas. The planting season is right now on. Cotton picking is almost finished. In most case you will have a few days between cotton picking and peanut digging. This would be a good time to sow the peas. Early planting or wincter peas is important, as they will make time over a big one that have time over a big one that have time over a big one that have time to get rooted before cold weather starts.
